RE: Chantecaille Beaute

Dear Kent:

Enclosed is a draft of agreement with Chantecaille Beaute for your review.

The agreement with Characcaille Beaute differs from our proposed agreement in the following ways:

- Chantecaille's business address has changed.
- 2. Chantecaille has amended its application so that the goods read "cosmetics, namely make-up, including foundation" and amended the agreement accordingly.
- Chantecaille's limitation on use depends on the ultimate and continued registration of your marks. See Paragraph 5.
- Please review Paragraph 14 carefully (regarding scope of agreement).

I will call you next week so we can discuss the agreement.

Take care.

ery truly yours.

Paul E. Fahrenkoof

Dear Mr. Anderson:

We are writing to you further to our letter of July 2, 2001, to which you did not reply.

As you know, we are intellectual property counsel for Chautecaille Beauté, Inc., a leading provider of high-end cosmetics in the United States. Among Chantecaille's products are the FUTURE SKIN line of cosmetics. Chantecaille also owns pending U.S. Application Serial No. 75/059,265 for the mark FUTURE SKIN for cosmetics, namely, make-up. The mark has been in use since April 2000.

We recently learned of your trademark application for FUTURE and Design (Serial No. 76/049,367) to be used in connection with an extensive list of hair and beauty care products, cosmetics and perfumes. The goods to be used in connection with your mark are in conflict with the goods under Chantecaille's mark FUTURE SKIN, and on behalf of our client, we will take the steps uccessary to prevent conflicting use and registration of your mark.

Chautecaille would be willing to consider an agreement under which you could use your mark in a way that does not conflict with Chantecaille's rights. By entering into such an agreement, you could retain some rights to your mark.

-and-

Opposition No: B 866022 thereto by your client Fokker Services B.V.

My ref: JL/10124

Further to my brief letter of 9th January 2007, I apologise for the delay in getting back to you. However, I have been discussing this case further with my client, who has been considering your client's proposal for a settlement of this case, along the lines as suggested in your letter of 16th August 2006. I am instructed to respond to you on my client's behalf as follows.

The extent to which your client's settlement proposal requires my client not only to exclude aircraft and aircraft-related goods and services from his CTM application, but also to agree not to use (with no further qualification as to where), and to consent to your client's use in the USA of, the mark "FUTURE" appears to go way beyond what is reasonable, both as regards geographical scope and so far shown by your client to be justified in terms of the respective parties' prior rights, whether in terms of trade mark filling date or date of first use. To put my client's view more succinctly, he believes your client is trying to "bite off too much" and feels he would be losing out too much in acceding to the suggested terms as set out in your letter.

The above is consistent with my client's general principle that he is unwilling to enter into any agreement which entails him giving up rights, or granting rights to others, that goes beyond what is proper and fair. More specifically, my client is anxious that his own rights in any registrations and freedom of use of or based on the "FUTURE" name, both in the EU and the USA (and also elsewhere), should not be compromised beyond that which he can see to be appropriate (in legal trade mark terms) and commercially reasonable, especially as regards who has the relevant senior rights in the relevant territories and in respect of the relevant goods/services of interest to each side. With this in mind, it is my client's belief that your client's existing proposal is too general and fair-reaching in your client's own favour to form the basis of a reasonable and fair settlement.

Nevertheless, my client would still prefer to try and settle this CTM opposition amicably without the need to go as far as the adversarial stages of the opposition procedure beyond 21° July 2007, since he still believes that a mutually beneficial co-existence arrangement should be possible and could still be sorted out with your client taking adequately into account both the UK, EU and USA (at least) and the more precisely defined respective senior rights positions of each party in each territory. Not only mutual co-existence, but possibly also working together may be an opportunity of interest to your client - you can see my client's business activities and interests from his website, www.futurevisionarles.com. However, it does appear that more detailed factual disclosures and discussions would be needed. If your client is amenable to such further negotiations, therefore, my client would welcome further talks, and to that end would welcome the chance to discuss more detailed proposals and possible terms with your client direct.

Please would you put the above to your client and let us know if and how they would be prepared to take all this further?

I look forward to hearing from you.

mathentin.

Yours sincerely

S. Jonathan Linn

Kent G. Anderson

Dear Mr. Anderson:

We are intellectual property counsel for Chantecaille Beauté, Inc., a leading provider of high-end cosmetics in the United States. For many years, Chautecaille Beauté, Inc. ("Chantecaille") has sold a line of cosmetics that are technologically sophisticated yet incorporate pure and natural ingredients which has been enormously successful and the subject of positive media reviews. (See attached articles from Internet web sites at Exhibit A.) Among Chantecaille's products are the FUTURE SKIN line of cosmetics. Chantecaille also owns pending U.S. Application Serial No. 75/059,265 for the mark FUTURE SKIN for cosmetics, namely, make-up. The mark has been in use since April 2000.

Mr. Kent G. Anderson July 2, 2001 Page 2

We recently learned of your trademark application for FUTURE and Design < (Serial No. 76/049,367) to be used in connection with "hair and beauty care products, cosmetics and perfumes." See attached printout at Exhibit B. Chantecaille's use predates the filing of your application. We do not know if you were aware of Chantecaille or its FUTURE SKIN trademark, but in our opinion your FUTURE and Design designation is confusingly similar to Chantecaille's trademark. Accordingly, any use by you of the term FUTURE and Design is likely to cause confusion among members of the public, and will damage the goodwill and value that Chantecaille possesses in its trademark.

Chantecaille reserves its right to oppose your registration and use of FUTURE and Design, but hopes this matter can be resolved without his gation. To that end, Chantecaille requests that you abandon the FUTURE and Design trademark application and make no further attempts to commercialize the mark.

Please contact is at your earliest convenience so we can discuss this matter in further detail.

Very trnly yours,

OSTROLENK FABER GERB & SOFFEN, LLP
